Note from the artist: "I recently lost my father on January 2, 2018. My father meant a lot to me and taught me many things in our time together such as mechanics, plumbing and electrical. In addition to basic life skills and trades, my father also taught me about his passion for the U.S. military in which he served.

This piece is the symbol of his platoon he was a part of. He taught me it is important to believe in America, to believe in the United States and to never feel like America is letting you down. This piece is a symble of my father; of his life, love,. honor, respect, loyalty and courage."
